POSTMASTER GENERAL IN DISGUISE.

By Sol Smith.

On my way to the north in 1835, in company with several gentlemen of New Orleans, it happened that the stage in which we were passengers, stopped for supper at a small village situated between the towns of Columbus and Zanesville, on the Cumberland road, in the state of Ohio.

There was a great gathering of militia captains, lieutenants, ensigns, sergeants and corporals, with a considerable sprinkling of privates, all of whom had been exhibiting their patriotism during the day, by marching up and down the road, shouldering arms, carrying arms, presenting arms, charging bayonets, preparatory to intended hostile operations against the neighboring state of Michigan, the authorities of which, and those of the state of Ohio, were at open war—almost—about boundary.

For the purpose of amusement, it had been agreed that the stage driver should be informed, confidentially, that I was Amos Kendall, Postmaster General of the United States, travelling in disguise, and assuming the very common name of Smith, in order to discover abuses in the transportation department. With many mysterious hints, and strict charge of secrecy, John was made acquainted with the awful fact, that he was actually driving the important individual above named. The reins almost fell from his hands as he exclaimed,

'What Mr Kindle? Amos Kindle—it can't be impossible.'

'It is possible,' answered the gentleman who was imparting the information, and who was enjoying an outside seat, 'and it is his wish to be entirely private to avoid the attention that would otherwise be lavished upon him.'

The driver promised his most inviolable secrecy, and proceeded to curry down his horses.

We had not been long in our hotel, where our supper was being prepared, before it was plainly perceptible that something was going on, curious glances were thrown into the bar room where we were sitting, military officers flitted about or collected into groups—the landlord and his family began to spruce up, in brief, it was evident our secret had been confident ially imparted to half of the village.

The first demonstration that was made, consisted of an invitation to my friends and myself to accept the use of a private parlor. This being at once agreed to, the landlord ventured to suggest that, if it was not disagreeable to me, my fellow citizens of the village would like to pay their respects to me, and take me by the hand.

'No objections in the world,' said I, 'let the worthy citizens come in.'

Then followed a scene of the richest kind of fun, but Dickens has described a similar adventure, and I pass on.

Supper was announced. I was placed at the head of the table, the richest viands and preserved fruits were set in profusion before us, We feasted—and during the operation numerous female heads, or rather heads of females, were continually popping in at the windows and open doors, while the piazza was filled with boys of all sizes, who amused themselves by firing off Chinese crackers, sending up young rockets, and shouting, 'Hurrah for Jackson, and his Cabinet.'

Supper over, we retired to the bar and demanded our bill of expenses. The landlord smilingly answered, that he was too happy to entertain us without compensation, he felt honored by my sitting at his board, and my friends were equally welcome. After much urging I consented to receive his hospitality, since he insisted upon it, but my friends, I would not consent that they should feast at his expense—oh no! They must be allowed to pay for their splendid supper. Well, if I insisted he would take pay for them—and he did.

'Could I say two or three words to you in private?' asked the landlord in a low voice, and he walked by my side toward the coach which was waiting.

'By all means,' I replied, and he led me a little one side, into a dark part of the piazza. After two or three hems, to clear his throat, the landlord commenced:

'Whatever others may think of you, sir, I consider you an honest man.'

'Sir, I feel very much obliged by the favorable estimate you have formed of me.'

'Yes sir, let the opposition say what they please, I believe you to be a conscientious individual—I do.'

'Well sir, considering this is the first time we have ever met, I must say your liberty is extraordinary; but I thank you for your good opinion.'

'Ah, sir, though we have never met, I know you well, we all know you for a most efficient officer, and a deserving man.'

'It is true I am tolerably well known in the western and southern country, and as for my efficiency I believe I do push about as hard as a man conveniently can.'

'That you do, all parties must acknowledge, you have effected many improvements in your department.'

'Yes, I flatter myself that in the stage department I have made some improvements.'

'Your removals have met with general approbation in this part of the country.'

'Removals? Oh, yes, I do travel a great deal.'

'Yes, you do, and to some purpose. Now I wanted to speak to you about the postmaster here.'

'Indeed! Well what of him?'

'Are you not aware that he is a whig?'

'No, is he?'

'Yes, he is, and it is thought by the friends of the administration here that he ought to be removed, and a good democrat appointed.'

'What is the office worth?'

'About five hundred dollars a year.'

'Who would be a proper person for the office?'

'Why I couldn't exactly say, but if—'

'Would you accept the appointment?'

'Most willingly, if you should think me worthy.'

'Well, I'll tell you what you'd better do. Write on to the department, state the matter as you stated it to me, and perhaps—'

'If you would just make a memorandum it would be sufficient.'

'My dear sir, don't depend on anything that passes between us here, here I am, Sol Smith, as you may see by the way-bill, but at Washington, you understand.'

'Yes, I understand. Then I'll write on to the department.'

'Yes, write.'

'Sir, I shall depend on your good offices.'

'Sir, you may, your supper was excellent, your attentions shall not soon be forgotten, farewell, write on to the department by all means.'

The worthy aspirant to the postmastership of the village accompanied me to the coach, carefully turned up the steps when I had entered, and then joined his fellow citizens in three loud cheers, with which our departure was honored.

A blacksmith who had been advised to bring a suit in Court, for slander replied that he could go into his shop and hammer out a better character than all the courts in Christendom could give him.

It often happens that those are the best people, whose characters have been most abused by slanderers. As we usually find that to be the sweetest fruit which the birds have been picking at.

Dr. John Barnheisel has been elected delegate to Congress from Utah.

The miser has a double sin to answer for, he hoards up that which perishes, and perishes himself, because he deprived others of its use.

Twenty thousand dollars have been subscribed in New York for the erection of a monument to the Americans who were massacred at Havana.

A Dutchman said the following to a friend, who had watched him for an hour or two, while he made ready, one cold winter's evening, a pitcher of cider. When it was in complete order, he raised the vessel to his lips, and without removing it, drained it to the very last drop. 'Dere now,' he said, holding out the pitcher to his friend, 'dat ish vat I calls coot eider! If you don't p'lieve dat ish coot eider, just you shmell the mug.'

OCTOBER.

By Miss Mary Lincoln Clinton.

Here thou art, October!
With thy chilling blight,
But the woodlands sober.
Don their robings bright;
And in gay apparel
Autumn groweth old.
Like some faded fair one
Decked in gems and gold,
Thus with vain endeavor
Striving to replace,
Beauty lost forever
To her haggard face.

Teach us, Oh thou Autumn!
With thy silent voice,
In such transient glory,
Never to rejoice,
Open out the measure
Of thy careful hoarde,
With such autumn treasure
Be our garners stored,
Truth and Faith be gathered
Up in golden sheaves,
When earths hopes are withered
Like thy yellow leaves.

Welcome then, October,
With thy changeful light,
For I love the sober
Mingled with the bright.
Through the flickering sunshine
Of thy doubtful day,
Sweet and wayward fancies
O'er my heart will stray.
And the north wind bluster,
With its savage mirth,
Bids the dear ones cluster
'Round the household hearth.

The AMERICAN EYE SALVE is recommended with perfect confidence to all who are troubled with weakor sore eyes, whether caused by acute or chronic inflamation,—of scrofula orgin—weakness or defect of vision—diseased state of the optic nerve—or too severe and long continued use of the eye.

"A cousin, about eight years old, being afflicted from infancy with sore eyes, had used every other remedy for the AM. EYE SALVE, which has cured his eyes and also a running sore on his face."

NEW OFFICERS AND CLERKS OF THE U. S. GOVERNMENT.

N. B. TAPSCOTT, Esq.

Mr. T. is a clerk in the Pension Office. He is in the prime of life, with a stout figure, about six feet in height, of common size, and inimitably formed; erect and graceful in air and attitude. His face is oval, fair; rather thin, with manly features of the finest proportion: His hair rather light, smooth and waving, shades a lofty forehead at once open and ingenuous, which reveals mind and intelligence. His joyous brow, bright and buoyant, is the very mirror of vivacity and good nature. His eye is a soft blue, and beams with that softened animation which sheds a halo over his fine features, and denotes gentleness and magnanimity of soul. His countenance mild and frank, has an unspeakable suavity of expression. His manners are of the old school, modest and unassuming.

This gentleman is a Virginian, and was raised within a few miles of Hon: John Randolph, of Roanoak.

Nathaniel P. Catlett, Esq.

Mr. C. is likewise attached to the Pension Office; also a Virginian, from Orange County. He is quite a young man, of common height, and the average size, with a neatly turned figure. His appearance is peculiarly striking, his look, his smile, and his manners, are exclusively a masterpiece of nature. His face is oval, of the middling shade, with regular features, rather delicate. His hair is of the deepest black, fine and silky—his forehead rather deep, is oval in the contour, smooth, and tranquil as the sleeping babe, is stamped with a guileless benignity that knows no change. His modest brow, high and intelligent, has a thoughtful expression, and bespeaks a quiet mind. His meek, large eye, dark grey (or hazel) is serene and steady, though penetrating, and bespeaks strong mental powers. But his placid countenance has a mingled expression of nobility, and innocence of the most touching sweetness—but the governing trait of his countenance is his ineffable smile.

From his middle name—Pendleton, he must appertain to the Pendletons of Virginia, one of the first families in the State.

Henry Clay Boudinot.

Mr. B. is in the bloom of manhood, of the medium height and common size, with a form of the finest symmetry. His face is fair and full, with a delicate carnation glow. His raven hair, fine and glossy, drops over his fine open forehead in beautiful ringlets. His mild dewy eye is a dark hazel, of singular beauty, clear and sparkling, the emblem of innocence and benignity. His bland intelligent forehead is the most prominent feature of his face. His delikately drawn brow, indicates evenness of temper, and his countenance is erudite and buoyant, and flows with benevolence and good nature itself. The poor young man however, was quite indisposed when we had the pleasure to meet with him. He is from New York, and of very respectable parents of our acquaintance.

Mr. ROBB.

Mr. R. is the son of our Rev. friend and favorite, Parson Robb, whom we have known many years, but never had the pleasure to see any of his children before, Mr. R. we believe, is another of the Pension clerks. He is in the fresh bloom of manhood, with a gentlemanly appearance, but totally unlike his noble Sire. Parson R. is a man of gigantic size, and rather dark visaged. Mr. Robb is about common height, rather under, with a stout stanch figure—though we could not tell exactly, as he was partly hid by his desk. His face is partially round, fair and full, with pleasing features, and a modest carnation blush. His fine smooth forehead bespeaks capacity and erudition, while his innocent brow breaths a sweetness and serenity of temper quite imposing. His soft azure eye, beams with vivacity and the very milk of human kindness. His countenance, frank and manly, and his manners are bland and pleasing.

MAJ. DENNEY,

We had the misfortune to lose or mislay some of our notes—but most of all we grieve for those relating to Maj. D, the first gentleman we met on the same day whilst looking for a friend. Being struck by the appearance of the stranger, and finding him employed in writing quietly at a desk, [in Winders] we exchanged salutations and drew from him his name and syle, But his general appearance we shall never forget, He appeared to be above the common stature, of becoming size, with that air of ease and composure by which the true gentleman is invariably distinguished, He gave us his name, the appointment which is Chief Clerk in the Paymaster General's office, if we do not mistake, He is in the prime of life, with fair pleasant features, and an intelligent blue eye—while his countenance and manners are dignified and manly, But we shall meet again,

Capt. John Y. Bryant, of California,[so he said]

Capt. B. is quite a splendid man, and it strikes us we have seen him before. He is an out and out Adonis of the Chesterfield height and size, and one of the best specimens of manly beauty to be met with, His raven hair, his rose and lilly complexion, his manly features, and above all, his mild dove-eye holds one spell bound,

From the Era of 16th instant.

"The Position of Parties,—The Presidential Question, is the caption of an ably written article, the leader under the editorial head of the Era of the 2d instant, Mr. Editor, which has not failed to attract very considerable interest in all who have read it in this part of the country.'

We have often warned the citizens of the United States to be aware of those common disturbers of the peace, the Anti Slave party:

It appears to us that the opinion of fools is uniformly founded upon false premises, that the most absurd, or to come to the point, utter impossibilities are to them what truth is to the wise and the good. Just hear to him—

"If General Scott shall be supported in the National Convention by the delegates from New England, his nomination will be certain, and if nominated, his election will be certain. This every Free Soil man in this part of the country admits, this every whig and every democrat admits."

What? after being killed in Pennsylvania! If Gen. Scott however, feels like imitating Aaron Burr, he had better step out of ranks, before he commands the regular army as President. There is little honor in being elected by Abolitionists, and their leaders, who lie by the ton—vide the above extract, and the following—

"New England has been flooded by printed copies of 'Lower Law' sermons, published under the direction of 'Castle Garden Committees,' and franked from Washington city, and with speeches delivered in Congress, and with addresses before meetings of the People in various places, all in favor of 'passive obedience' and 'non-resistance to the powers that be,' and she has at last concluded to away with such teachings, and to adhere to first principles, and follow not after those who fear the Slave power more than they fear the displeasure of the True God. * *

'Remember, that of all the men now named for the Presidency, General Winfield Scott is the only one who can receive a majority of the votes of any one of the New England States, and he can receive a majority in every one of them, as all the whigs, some of the Free Soil men, and many of the Democrats, will vote for him. Mark this prediction.

New Hampshire."

Go it, ladies, hoist the breeches,
Don the costume, a la Turc,

Go it, ladies—now's the weather,
Don't you think it is so too?

AN OFFER OF MARRIAGE.

Most worthy of admiration,
After long consideration,
And serious meditation,
Of the great reputation
You have in this nation,
I have a strong inclination
To become your relation.
I am making preparation
To remove my habitation
To a more convenient situation,
To pay your adoration
By more frequent visitation.
If this kind of oblation
Be worthy your observation,
It would be an obligation
Beyond all moderation,
Believe me, in every station,
From generation to generation.

THE LADY'S ANSWER.

I received your adoration
With much deliberation,
And some course nation
At the seeming infatuation
That seized your imagination
When you made such a declaration,
On so slender a foundation,
But on examination,
Supposed it done from ostentation,
To display your education,
Or rather multiplication.
Though with great variation.
And different signification.
Which without disputation
May deserve commendation,
And I think imitation
A sufficient gratification.

DEVOTED TO MORALITY, PURE LITERATURE, FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC NEWS, AGRICULTURE, SCIENCE, ART AND AMUSEMENT.

This paper contains from one-fourth to one half more than the generality of two Dollar city weeklies.

The Proprietors of the SATURDAY EVENING POST return their sincere thanks to their friends and the public for the patronage extended to them since the enlargement of their paper, and respectfully solicit a continuance of the same. The belief expressed in their last Prospectus, that the POST is destined to take it stand at the very head of the weekly press is fast becoming realized. The reason of this is in a great degree, to be found in the stand the POST has always taken against the immoral literature of the day. The public have felt, in the language of the North American and United States Gazette, of this city, that "The Post has done much towards correcting the taste of the newspaper reading public."

The proprietors of the Saturday Evening Post, in coming before the public with a new Prospectus, would respectfully solicit attention to what they have done in the past, as a guarantee for their promises of the future. They may safely say that no other paper in America has given to its readers so large and well chosen an amount of all kinds of reading, elegant and useful imaginative and practical, during the last year as the Post. To say nothing of other tales and sketches, what paper has laid before its subscribers during the past year four such novelets as Henery Benson,' 'The child Stealer,' 'Isabel Denison,' and The Deserted Wife?'

And the proprietors of the Post are determined that if possible the coming year shall be even a more brilliant one than the past. To begin with they have already secured the following original contributions, which will be published, and other choice pictures of life during the coming year:

PROSPECTUS OF THE NATIONAL MONUMENT,

A WEEKLY JOURNAL,

To be published in Washington, under the auction of the Washington National Monument Society.

JAMES C. PICKETT, Editor and Publisher.

The Monument is intended to be a literary, agricultural, and miscellaneous paper. It will contain select portions of the literature of the day- the best that can be found in American and European publications; interesting scientific articles, embracing mechanics, foreign and domestic news, a synopsis of the proceedings of Congress, and everything that such a journal might be expected to contain, with the exception of party politics, which will be at all times most rigorously excluded.

The Monument will be published for the express and sole purpose of aiding in the erection of the noble column now rising on the bank of the Potomac, in honor of the Father of his Country, and which every one who venerate the name of Washington, would rejoice to see completed. After deducting out of the subscription, the expense of the journal proposed to be published, the remaining funds will be faithfully applied, and without reserve, to the purpose indicated. The aid therefore, of all who are willing to contribute to so patriotic an object, and one so entirely national, is earnestly requested. By subscribing to the Monument a valuable journal at a low price may be obtained, while it will be doing something, at the same time, towards completing that majestic memorial of the Nation's gratitude.

The Board of Managers recommend Mr. Pickett, formerly Fourth Auditor of the Treasury and Charge d'Affaires to Peru, who proposes to edit and publish the Monument journal at one well qualified to perform the duties of editor, and to conduct the paper, faithfully and satisfactorily to the subscribers. They assure their fellow citizens that this enterprise is not a speculation got up for individual emolument. Mr. Pickett will make the experiment with his own means and at his own risk, and if successful, he will receive nothing more, and he asks nothing more, than a very moderate compensation for his services. Not one dollar therefore, of the direct subscription to the erection of the Monument will be, in any event, applied to the support of the paper, nor the Society in any manner held pecuniarly responsible.

To give the public an idea of what may be done with the journal it is proposed to publish it may be stated that a list of fifty thousand paying subscribers, at two dollars each, will yield an annual net profit of from fifty to sixty thousand dollars.

☞ The postmasters and Secretaries of all organized bodies throughout the Union, are respectfully requested to act as agents in obtaining subscriptions, thus aiding the great object of our exertions.

All moneys will be remitted and all letters and communications addressed prepaid, to the General agent of the Monument Society, Hon. Elisha Whittlesey. Washington.

TERMS.—The Monument will be printed on double royal sheet—the paper and type being of the best quality—and in quarto form, containing sixteen large pages, that it may be more easily preserved. The price will be two dollars per annum, payable on the receipt of the second number. The nature of the enterpriss not admitting of any credit, none can be given

A year since I was taken with the influenza and my whole system left in a debilitated state. I was induced to try Dr. Townsend's Sarsaparilla.

PROSPECTUS
NATIONAL MONUMENT,
A WEEKLY JOURNAL,

To be published in Washington, under the auction of the Washington National Monument Society.

JAMES C. PICKETT, Editor and Publisher.

The Monument is intended to be a literary, agricultural, and miscellaneous paper. It will contain select portions of the literature of the day- the best that can be found in American and European publications; interesting scientific articles, embracing mechanics, foreign and domestic news, a synopsis of the proceedings of Congress, and everything that such a journal might be expected to contain, with the exception of party politics, which will be at all times most rigorously excluded.

The Monument will be published for the express and sole purpose of aiding in the erection of the noble column now rising on the bank of the Potomac, in honor of the Father of his Country, and which every one who venerate the name of Washington, would rejoice to see completed. After deducting out of the subscription, the expense of the journal proposed to be published, the remaining funds will be faithfully applied, and without reserve, to the purpose indicated. The aid therefore, of all who are willing to contribute to so patriotic an object, and one so entirely national, is earnestly requested. By subscribing to the Monument a valuable journal at a low price may be obtained, while it will be doing something, at the same time, towards completing that majestic memorial of the Nation's gratitude.

The Board of Managers recommend Mr. Pickett, formerly Fourth Auditor of the Treasury and Charge d'Affaires to Peru, who proposes to edit and publish the Monument journal at one well-qualified to perform the duties of editor, and to conduct the paper, faithfully and satisfactorily to the subscribers. They assure their fellow citizens that this enterprise is not a speculation got up for individual emolument. Mr. Pickett will make the experiment with his own means and at his own risk, and if successful, he will receive nothing more, and he asks nothing more, than a very moderate compensation for his services. Not one dollar therefore, of the direct subscription to the erection of the Monument will be, in any event, applied to the support of the paper, nor the Society in any manner held pecuniarily responsible.

To give the public an idea of what may be done with the journal it is proposed to publish it may be stated that a list of fifty thousand paying subscribers, at two dollars each, will yield an annual net profit of from fifty to sixty thousand dollars.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST
UNRIVALLED INDUCEMENTS FOR 1850

A MAMMOTH PAPER.
DEVOTED TO MORALITY, PURE LITERATURE, FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC NEWS, AGRICULTURE, SCIENCE, ART AND AMUSEMENT.

This paper contains from one-fourth to one-half more than the generality of two Dollar city weeklies.

The Proprietors of the SATURDAY EVENING POST return their sincere thanks to their friends and the public for the patronage extended to them since the enlargement of their paper, and respectfully solicit a continuance of the same. The belief expressed in their last Prospectus, that the POST is destined to take it stand at the very head of the weekly press is fast becoming realized. The reason of this is in a great degree, to be found in the stand the POST has always taken against the immoral literature of the day. The public have felt, in the language of the North American and United States Gazette, of this city, that "The Post has done much towards correcting the taste of the newspaper reading public."

The proprietors of the Saturday Evening Post, in coming before the public with a new Prospectus, would respectfully solicit attention to what they have done in the past, as a guarantee for their promises of the future. They may safely say that no other paper in America has given to its readers so large and well chosen an amount of all kinds of reading, elegant and useful imaginative and practical, during the last year as the Post. To say nothing of other tales and sketches, what paper has laid before its subscribers during the past year four such novelets as Henety Benson,' 'The child Stealer,' 'Isabel Denison,' and The Deserted Wife?'

And the proprietors of the Post are determined that if possible the coming year shall be even a more brilliant one then the past. To begin with they have already secured the following original contributions, which will be published, and other choice pictures of life during the coming year;

The Baymounts: A Novelet by Miss Leslie; author of "Mrs, Washington Potts &c. &c.

The Bride Of An Evening, A Tale Of Western Life A Novelet, by Mrs Southworth, author of "retribution," 'The Deserted Wife,' &c

The Old Astrolger or, The Prophecy Fulfilled, A Novelet by T S Arthur, author of 'agnes or the Possessed,' the Child stealer,' &c,
